

BIO

Deb Brown is an artist, conceptual thinker and pragmatist. She holds a degree in Economics from Bowdoin College and studied Studio Art at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Deb grew up in the south but hasn't been back since she returned to her roots in the northeast as she prefers snow to surf.

Deb has considerable experience in the interactive arena as a User Experience designer. She has provided strategic UX vision and solutions for clients such as IBM, Iron Mountain, Staples, GM, Trip Advisor and others. As a devoted practitioner of her craft Deb is a member of ACM SIGCHI and UPA. Current interests in the area of usability revolve around creating clear visualizations for large data sets and communicating clearly to systems developers and non-technical information seekers.

Mostly Deb enjoys cooking wonderful meals in her amazing gourmet kitchen.
